Location: Faculty of Health Sciences, Hokkaido University, Sapporo
Zoom attendance option available!

Clinicians, Educators, Researchers, Care staff and Students all welcome

Moderator: Daisuke Sawamura, Faculty of Health Science, HU
Marianne Coleman, Faculty of Medicine, Dentistry and Health Sciences, UoM

An interprofessional learning afternoon to celebrate allied health research about care of older adults in Australia and Japan, and set goals for future collaborations in interprofessional research and education.

Older adults have complex health needs that could be addressed by integrated care systems, but when, where, and how should allied health disciplines be involved?
RESEARCH SHOWCASE: Allied health researchers from Australia & Hokkaido present unique research.
DISCUSSION GROUP: Share your views about interprofessional education, practice and research.

Why should I attend?
Learn about the practicalities of doing allied health research with older adults
Help us set priorities for future interprofessional education and research initiatives
Share your views on barriers and facilitators to effective integration of allied health disciplines in team-based care for older adults

Hokkaido University and The University of Melbourne are pleased to announce this interprofessional learning afternoon, part of our Joint Workshop series. These events aim to strengthen collaboration between healthcare research, education and practice, and deepen understanding between various allied health disciplines of our combined roles in patient care. The events are directed to clinicians, researchers, educators, students and those involved in allied health and ageing.
